

ARISTON

DUBEK'S
EXTRA
FILTER
CIGARETTE

THURSDAY,
AUGUST 7, 1958

THE JERUSALEM POST

PRICE: 100 PRUTA
VOL. XXXIV, No. 3185

RALGIN
AGAINST HEADACHE
AND TOOTHACHE

U.K. Premier To Athens Today For Cyprus Talks

LONDON (Reuter). — Prime Minister Macmillan is flying to Athens on Thursday (today) in a Royal Air Force Comet jetliner for talks with Mr. Constantine Karamanlis, the Greek Premier, on the Cyprus situation. It was officially stated.

It was confirmed at No. 10 Downing Street that the Prime Minister had received a reply from Mr. Karamanlis.

On June 10, Mr. Macmillan offered to meet the Greek and Turkish Premiers, either separately or together, to discuss the Cyprus situation. No meetings were arranged but when the Turkish Foreign Minister, Mr. Adnan Menderes, was in London for the meeting of the Baghdad Pact Ministerial Council last month, he called on Mr. Macmillan.

Mr. Macmillan's personal message to Mr. Karamanlis said the Cyprus Governor, Sir Hugh Foot, would join him in Athens.

A Greek Foreign Ministry spokesman said the talks between Mr. Macmillan and Mr. Karamanlis would not be based on the latest British proposals for Cyprus.

(The latest plan, announced June 19, provides for a British-Greek-Turkish partnership to administer internal self-government for seven years and possibly eventual shared sovereignty. It has been rejected by both Greeks and Turks.)

Mr. Macmillan is expected to spend three days in the Greek capital.

In Athens, Archbishop Makarios, exiled leader of the union-with-Greece movement in Cyprus, conferred with Mr. Karamanlis. He said later he was in "full agreement" with the Greek Government on the handling of the Cyprus issue.

A No. 10 report said a Greek Cypriot policeman was found dead in Moutoussi village, 30 kilometres north-west of Nicosia. It was the first killing since truce proclamations by the Greek and Turkish underground organizations earlier this week. Later a 30-year-old Cypriot Greek woman was found murdered in her home in Nicosia. Officials said she appeared to be at least 12 days dead, indicating that she was killed before the truce.

Discovery of the bodies followed a day of comparative calm officially recorded as the quietest for two months. Political circles pointed out that the policeman's killing did not necessarily mean that the truce had been broken as EOKA's ceasefire applies only "against Britons and Turks." Greek circles believed the victim was on the EOKA list of traitors.

Formosa Prepares For MIG-17 Air Attack

TAIWAN (Reuter). — Chinese shore batteries on Amoy on Wednesday bombarded the Nationalist-held island of Quemoy for the third consecutive day.

The Defence Ministry said the entire armed forces of Nationalist China were maintaining a redoubled alert following the arrival of MIG-17 aircraft at Lungku air base on Quemoy. The chief of staff, Gen. Wang Shu-min, has broadcast a warning that Formosa must prepare for an enemy air attack.

Three Years' Jail For False Alarm

YARMOUTH, Nova Scotia (Reuter). — A 17-year-old lad was sentenced to three years in jail here on Wednesday after pleading guilty to giving a false telephone warning that there was a bomb aboard an airplane.

It was believed to be the first conviction for such an offence in Canada.

Teamster Chief Claims Luck At Races; Kierdorf Story Doubted

WASHINGTON (UPI). — The President of the Teamsters Union, Mr. James R. Hoffa, told Senate rackets investigators on Wednesday that $60,322 in miscellaneous income over many years came from "fortunate" bets on the horses.

He denied, in a shouting match with the investigators, that he received any part of an alleged $17,500 payoff that Detroit laundry owners claim they made to a labour consultant to settle a labour dispute.

The committee brought out that Mr. Hoffa's tax return from 1948 to 1956 listed $60,322 in income from "gambling gains," "wagering," "collections received," and "miscellaneous earnings." The union leader attributed the total to his good luck on the track but he was unable to give any details.

In Detroit, a prosecutor said on Wednesday that the statement of the Teamsters Union official, Frank Kierdorf, of how he was turned into a human torch, "that all the particulars of a complete lie."

Another investigator was looking for a theory that Kierdorf was burned in an accident.

U.S. to Urge Aid For M.E. at Assembly

WASHINGTON. — President Eisenhower said at his press conference on Wednesday that he would be ready personally to attend a special U.N. General Assembly session on the Middle East, if it were necessary or desirable.

He said he knew of no general intention on the parts of other heads of government to go to the meeting. There were no plans for him to do so.

The President stated that U.S. troops would be withdrawn from the Lebanon when the Lebanese Government feels the situation is in hand.

Mr. Eisenhower said the U.S. wants to discuss the whole Middle Eastern regional situation, and indicated it was not practical to discuss the Lebanon alone.

Backs Arab Nationalism

He said the U.S. believed in Arab nationalism, and in a diplomatic recognition to the United Arab Republic because of this belief. He stressed the need for improved living standards in the Arab world especially, and urged legitimate economic development.

In answer to a question, the President said he felt it was desirable and wise to take a fresh look at such problems as Arab nationalism and Israel's borders.

In his reference to the need for development in the Middle East, Mr. Eisenhower said the U.S. sought acceptance of Eric Johnston's integration plan, but that "neither side" could accept the political consequences of agreement to the scheme that would be of mutual benefit.

He cited the Johnston plan as an example of possible development projects. He urged capital investment for private economic development, and said the U.S. must help.

Mao's Influence

The President indicated agreement with the theory that Mao Tse-tung, the Chinese Communist leader, had played a role in the change in Soviet tactics regarding a summit meeting on the Middle East.

Answering questions, Mr. Eisenhower said the U.S. would be prepared to join in a constructive economic development. In the Middle East through the U.N. He said he hoped the Soviet Union would not only be prepared to do the same thing, but would observe its commitments.

He laid heavy emphasis on the need for a constructive, rather than a negative, approach in the Middle East.

The discovery of the bodies followed a day of comparative calm officially recorded as the quietest for two months. Political circles pointed out that the policeman's killing did not necessarily mean that the truce had been broken as EOKA's ceasefire applies only "against Britons and Turks." Greek circles believed the victim was on the EOKA list of traitors.

(Leader — Page 4)

Allies Drafting Security Plan

UNITED NATIONS (UPI). — The U.S. and its closest allies worked Wednesday on a security programme for the Middle East to be put before the General Assembly expected to start next week.

The U.S. quickly accepting Russia's challenge to a special Assembly meeting, planned to present its terms for a sweeping Middle East discussion when the U.N. Security Council meets Thursday afternoon.

The Council has before it Russia's demand for an Assembly session to get American and British troops out of Lebanon and Jordan.

Mr. Eisenhower said the U.S. has a priority demand before the Council for an Assembly session to discuss the threat to Lebanon, and this was expected to be expanded to embrace the entire Middle East question when it goes before the 11-nation assembly.

The Soviet Union Wednesday introduced a resolution in the Security Council calling for an emergency Special Assembly to consider "the immediate withdrawal" of American and British forces from Lebanon and Jordan.

Immediate Evacuation

The draft would have the Council state that Anglo-American actions constituted "a threat to international peace and security" and that the 11 member organ itself had "proved unable to exercise its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security."

While Mr. Eisenhower told his special conference (column 2) that he might attend the Assembly meeting, the British Foreign Office frowned on participation in the meeting by heads of government and London diplomats indicated Britain would react more favourably to Assembly attendance by Foreign Ministers.

In Paris, Information Minister Jacques Soustelle said it was "absurd" to believe such a session could solve any real problems but other authoritative sources said "of course" France would attend the meeting even though it was "not the best procedure for arriving at a solution of the problems in the Middle East."

(Leader — Page 4)

France May Boycott Assembly Over Algeria

PARIS. — Information Minister Jacques Soustelle indicated on Wednesday that France would walk out of the U.N. General Assembly on the Middle East if the session also turned into a discussion on Algeria.

He made the comment after a two-hour Cabinet meeting which was in part devoted to the latest Soviet demand for an emergency session of the Assembly to discuss the Middle East. He said that France could not participate in a debate if certain powers tried to divert the discussion from its real object to go into Algerian and North African problems.

Mr. Soustelle said the proposal did not seem realistic to the French Government. But he added that the Middle East situation worsened, and that nothing would be "independent."

Mr. Soustelle said the proposal did not seem realistic to the French Government. But he added that the Middle East situation worsened, and that nothing would be "independent."

If prices continued to rise, there would come a time when the American consumer would rebel in a big way. The income of the American working man lagged steadily behind the rising cost of living, he said.

(UPI, Reuter)

Eisenhower Urges Price Restraint

WASHINGTON (Reuter). — President Eisenhower said Wednesday that American business would have to curb price increases or the consumer was going to rebel. He added that labour also would have to use restraint about wage demands.

Asked at his press conference if, in the light of recent increases in steel prices, his administration had any plan to fight inflation, he said both labour and business would have to use restraint without artificial controls.

If prices continued to rise, there would come a time when the American consumer would rebel in a big way. The income of the American working man lagged steadily behind the rising cost of living, he said.

(UPI, Reuter)

Five Jewish Families Settle in Birobjan

MONSOU (UPI). — Soviet

Russia may have resumed its efforts to resettle Jews from European Russia near the Chinese border, it was indicated on Wednesday.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

The bodies of five of the 11 infiltrators killed in the prison break are to be repatriated to Jordan through Mandaba Gate today.

The Jordanian authorities, at the request of the families, in Jordan, on Tuesday applied to Israel for the bodies. (The other six infiltrators killed were not Jordanians.) The Israel authorities agreed to hand over the bodies.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 7, 1958

Mizrahi Women's Organization of America invite you to tour their projects and visit their tourist clubs at:

TEL AVIV: 16 Ben Yehuda St.
JERUSALEM: 50 King George St.
HAIFA: 25 Arnoni St. H. 6231Today's Postbag*The Weather

Weather Synopsis: A trough of low pressure shot which passed our region Wednesday caused a slight drop in temperatures.

MT. CARNAU: 40 30 21 21
Tiberias: 34 24 20 20
Haifa Port: 35 25 20 20
Jerusalem: 41 30 25 20
Tel Aviv: Kirya: 32 22 20 20
Tel Aviv: Port: 38 24 20 20
Lydda: Airport: 38 19 21 20
Jerusalem: 42 30 25 20
Beersheba: 38 27 20 20
Sde Boker: 36 27 20 20
Bilat: 35 26 20 20

* At 10 humidity at 8 p.m. 20
Minimum temp. yesterday, 20
Maximum temp. yesterday, 20
Maximum temp. expected today.

ARRIVALS

Dr. P. Shinar, Director of the Shilshuv Corporation, for consultations with the Ministers of Finance and of Commerce and Industry.

Mr. A. Rosen, of the Koor Company management, after a visit to Europe, (by El Al).

DEPARTURES

Mr. B. Tisch, Chief Agricultural Instructor in the Ministry of Agriculture, for Cyprus, where he will advise the government on carb production under the auspices of the F.A.O.

M. H. Vicari, chief engineer of Orly Airport, Paris, after consultations in connection with improvements at Lydda Airport, (by Air France).

Dr. A. Amira, Associate Professor of Mathematics at the Hebrew University and Chairman of the Israel Mathematical Union, for America, to attend the International Assembly of the International Mathematical Union and the International Congress of Mathematicians.

Mr. A. Diamantchik, editor of "Ma'ariv," Mr. Ronen, (by El Al), Professors Arye Hirsch and Arye Fensterfeld, for Bratislava, to participate in the International Parachute Jump Contest.

Dr. Y. Melman, Director of the Jewish Agency Department of Education for the Diaspora for a two-and-a-half month visit to Switzerland and South America.

112 IMMIGRANTS, mainly from Poland, and one from South America, arrived in Haifa Artsa on Wednesday. Also among the passengers were several groups who will take part in the Zionists.

Goldmann Denies Resignation Reports

Dr. Nahum Goldmann, President of the World Zionist Organization, on Wednesday denied press reports that he intended to resign.

A statement issued by the Jewish Agency in Jerusalem declared that Dr. Goldmann, who left Israel on Tuesday for Europe, was contacted by long-distance telephone by Mr. Zalman Shazar, Chairman of the Jerusalem Executive, following press reports of the purported resignation. Dr. Goldmann authorized Mr. Shazar to publish the denial in his name.

KNESSET

(Continued from Page One)

the following changes:

• Survey is now imposed on information given to the tax authorities, who may reveal only such information as is specifically permitted in the Income Tax Ordinance.

• The only information that the tax authorities may furnish to the National Insurance Institute is the amount of income as reflected in the taxpayer's return or in the most recent assessment made.

• The right to make deductions for amortization is extended to fruit trees.

• The additional deduction allowed to a widower will also apply to a widower with a son in the Army.

• The salary is dependent on the number of dependents. It is increased from IL 600 to IL 650, without affecting the taxpayer's right to a deduction.

• Additional pay for night shift work is put in the same category as overtime pay. A maximum rate of 25 per cent is fixed for additional pay for work on the night shift or on days off.

• The deduction for a paralysed wife, or for a paralysed child, maintained in an institution, is raised from IL 600 to IL 650.

Among the changes made in the Government bill and left unchanged by the committee is one allowing companies to deduct the corporate profit tax in calculating their income tax. As a result their overall taxes will be reduced from 88 per cent to 40 per cent.

Allowances paid by an employer to cover expenditure for professional literature are exempted from tax.

Other provisions of the bill are:

• The Minister of Finance is authorized to limit to 25 per cent the tax payable on bonds issued to foreign residents in foreign currencies.

• Bachelors over 20 are entitled to the additional IL 250 exemption now enjoyed by bachelors over 32.

• The deduction for the fourth and each additional child is increased from IL 600 to IL 650. The deduction for a paralysed wife and for a paralysed or defective child is raised from IL 600 to IL 650.

• Persons disabled by heart, stroke, paralysis or in other incidents will be entitled to a deduction of IL 250 for each child, disability, and IL 600 for disability of 50 per cent or over.

Ben-Gurion Tries His Hand At Quizzing Amos Hacham

Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion received Mr. Amos Hacham, Israel's Bible champion, in his office in Jerusalem on Wednesday morning, and after complimenting the scholar on his achievement proceeded to conduct a private Bible quiz of his own.

"Who was the Biblical character who wrote the biography of another man?" asked the Prime Minister.

"The prophet Isaiah," replied Mr. Hacham immediately, "who wrote the life of King Uzziah."

Mr. Ben-Gurion then praised King Uzziah who had invented the Nephe and invented war engines. Perhaps it was because of this, mused the Prime Minister, that Uzziah was privileged to have his life written by the greatest of the Hebrew prophets.

The two men then became involved in a question and answer session, led by Mr. Ben-Gurion, who was a Christian.

Most Important Event

The conversation about the two men lasted about an hour, at the end of which the national contact held Monday evening, Tel Aviv's Mann Auditorium was the most important event of the Tenth Anniversary year, and an historic evening.

I gave expression to the fact that with the establishment of Israel independence, the people have returned to the Bible — which is the source and spirit of the nation."

Mr. Hacham had been called to the phone in the morning at the Jerusalem School for the Blind where he works as a clerk and heard a voice at the other end say, "The Prime Minister would like to see you."

He hurried back to the house of Dr. Feivel Meltzer, at whose home he is now staying, borrowed a suit and white shirt, and rushed to the Prime Minister's office.

Mr. Ben-Gurion greeted him with, "I must tell you Amos, that hearing the quiz over the radio, was for me, as a Jew, a wonderful experience and I am sure the entire nation shares this feeling. You, Amos, have enhanced the glory of Israel and we are all proud of you."

Mr. Ben-Gurion, like the majority of Israel, sat by the radio through the entire four-hour broadcast of the quiz.

He said the question he liked best was: "What is common to both King Jerome and Aaron, the memory of whom is the golden calf?" The answer was that each had a son with almost identical names: Aaron's were Nadav and Avihu, and Jerome's were Nadav and Avihu.

POPE SENDS BLESSING WITH BIBLE SCHOLAR

KIRYAT: Pope Pius XII recently sent his blessing to the people of Israel, it was announced here today by the winner of the all-Italy Bible Quiz.

The blessing was spoken during a private audience the Pope gave Miss Laura Cerutti, who is due to weekend to participate in the finale in Jerusalem of the International Bible Quiz.

Is Israel for a Middle East arms embargo?

Before speaking on any arms embargo, it is essential that a balance in armed strength between Israel and the Arabs be restored, and then there would have to be absolutely effective control from any possible loopholes."

Replies to a Pakistani correspondent regarding Nasser's offer of a peace settlement on the basis of the frontiers as laid down by the U.N. in 1947 resolutions, Mrs. Meir ironically thanked the Egyptian President for his "generosity." "The 1947 frontiers were washed away with blood and tears and the Arabs who fell wounding the aggression of the Arab states which rejected the 1947 resolutions. Just as our dead cannot be resurrected, so those frontiers cannot be revived. We won't yield a single square inch of our territory, none of which in any case ever belonged before 1948 to any of our Arab neighbours who attacked us."

Mr. Meir, for whom Mr. Tsur acted as interpreter, explained his conviction that the summit conference on the Middle East could succeed, but only if all parties came to it with a genuine desire for peace.

"From France," she said in conclusion, "I am taking home a message of real, traditional friendship."

An Egyptian was present among the newspapermen present and asked to interview Mrs. Meir. It is understood that his request will be granted if proper safeguards can be devised against possible misrepresentation.

Mrs. Meir lunched with M. Malraux, Minister for the Premier's Office, at Ambassador Tsur's home. On Thursday, she is meeting Information Minister Jacques Soustelle.

GIRL, 8, KILLED BY ICE TRUCK

Eight-year-old Dafna Arnon was killed on Wednesday near her home in Moshav Bet Shemesh when she was run over by a tender driven by Yosef Diamant, the iceman. Rabbi Unterman unveiled the new name plate of the street.

The former Cabinet Minister was eulogized by Mayor Meir Levanon and by Deputy Mayor A. Boyar. Chief Rabbi Unterman unveiled the new name plate of the street.

TEL AVIV STREET NAMED FOR PINKAS

TEL AVIV: — Municipal leaders on Tuesday paid tribute to David Zvi Pinkas, former Minister of Communications, in renaming the former Hovev Zion Street.

The former Cabinet Minister was eulogized by Mayor Meir Levanon and by Deputy Mayor A. Boyar. Chief Rabbi Unterman unveiled the new name plate of the street.

WILLIAM LEVINE

Eight-year-old Dafna Arnon was killed on Wednesday near her home in Moshav Bet Shemesh when she was run over by a tender driven by Yosef Diamant, the iceman. Rabbi Unterman unveiled the new name plate of the street.

Villager Dies Of Mysterious Poison

ACRE: — Fifteen-year-old Khalil Ibrahim Dib died on Wednesday at the Moshav Hospital a short while after being admitted suffering from the effects of poison. His body was taken to Moshav Hospital in Haifa to determine the exact cause of death.

MENTAL HOME INMATE HANGS HIMSELF

A 16-year-old inmate of the Asa Mental Asylum in Ramat Gan on Tuesday committed suicide by hanging. He hanged himself with his belt from a window-ledge of one of the buildings at the asylum.

Slight Relief in Heat

Hot summer weather prevailed on Wednesday throughout the country although a slight drop in temperatures was recorded in some places during the evening. Temperatures on Thursday will remain about the same, with small rises forecast for a few evenings.

RECOMMENDATIONS for foreign currency allocations for businessmen who wish to travel abroad on business matters may be made from next Sunday by the head of the district office of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry.

Finis Put To Steinberg Burial

Jerusalem Post Reporter

PARLIAMENT — The Local Council on Tuesday night decided unanimously to bury the remains of the "Member of the Year," Mr. Aharon Niv, Deputy Director of the Ministry of Defence, told cor-

Rise in Religious Exemptions

Jerusalem Post Military Correspondent

TEL AVIV: — The number of girls requesting religious exemption rose by approximately five per cent during 1957. Mr. Aharon Niv, Deputy Director of the Ministry of Defence, told cor-

Navy Captures A Ball

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA: — The Navy has captured this year's fundraising ball of the Shabat Levy Children's Centre and is sprucing up and decorating its Bat Galim Camp for the occasion next Saturday night.

In the past, this annual affair has been held at the Pinhas Rutenberg and Garden on Mt. Carmel under the auspices of the Northern District Council. But this year the Navy decided on the new camp. The Navy O.C. Abi S. Tankin, is patron of the

The Ministry has no power to call to service those men and women who it is believed have obtained their draft by fraud, Mr. Niv said.

This would be possible only if the Knesset passed an amendment to the law which would permit the conscription authorities to appeal against exemptions granted by an appeal committee. Under the present law, the decision is final, as a committee is final, and the conscription person may appeal against it.

Mr. Israel Amir, Head of the Manpower Division, told reporters that his department has reduced the number of its employees over the past few years, although the scope of its work has increased. This was achieved by rationalization of the I.M.C. machine. Several senior officials have spent some time abroad studying administrative procedure.

Discharged soldiers are given advice and guidance by a special department headed by Mr. Haim Eshkol. They are given the opportunity of taking a year-long course in agriculture training, as there is a need for civilian shoemakers and tailors. Most young men seeking a job today want to be drivers.

The department is also carrying out a programme to transfer their functions to Government organizations. The work of the burial societies was a religious matter, they claimed, and decided to appoint a six-man special body headed by Rabbi A.M. Shaag to combat the measure.

Representatives of burial societies from Jerusalem, Tel Aviv, Netanya, Haifa, Tiberias, Rishon LeZion and other places throughout the country met in Tel Aviv on Tuesday to protest against the recent proposals to transfer their functions to Government organizations. The work of the burial societies was a religious matter, they claimed, and decided to appoint a six-man special body headed by Rabbi A.M. Shaag to combat the measure.

The Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Hebrew language movement should be accorded a definite mandate from the Israel Government and the Zionist movement, speakers urged at the opening on Wednesday of the World Hebrew Union executive meeting in Jerusalem.

The Minister of Education, Mr. Zalman Aran, in an unanticipated appearance, indicated that the Government would expand cultural cooperation to the Union in its dissemination of the Hebrew language abroad.

Opportunity was knocking at the Union's door in the form of a Hebrew renaissance in the Diaspora, and particularly in the U.S., Rabbi S. Federbusch, Chairman of the U.S. Hebrew Teachers Association, who presided, told the 600-man executive. Mr. Zalman Aran, the Union's president urged it to enter new fields to reach every person who cared for Hebrew.

The Minister of Education, Mr. Zalman Aran, in an unanticipated appearance, indicated that the Government would expand cultural cooperation to the Union in its dissemination of the Hebrew language abroad.

The Jerusalem Post Reporter

emphasized the need for a clear mandate for the Union, not only to promote study of Hebrew, but also to fight for a full Hebrew curriculum in Jewish schools abroad.

Mr. David Berman, of South Africa, brought greetings on behalf of the World Jewish Union executive meeting in Jerusalem.

A discussion during the evening was opened by Dr. Moshe Davis and Dr. Reuven Gafni, of the U.S. and Dr. Andre Chouraqui, of France.

The World Jewish Students Congress in Jerusalem on Wednesday issued a call to the Foreign Minister to offer its services to Jewish students.

Mr. Zalman Aran, the Union's president urged it to enter new fields to reach every person who cared for Hebrew.

The Jerusalem Post Reporter

reaffirmed the need for a clear mandate for the Union, not only to promote study of Hebrew, but also to fight for a full Hebrew curriculum in Jewish schools abroad.

Mr. Zalman Aran, the Union's president urged it to enter new fields to reach every person who cared for Hebrew.

The Jerusalem Post Reporter

emphasized the need for a clear mandate for the Union, not only to promote study of Hebrew, but also to fight for a full Hebrew curriculum in Jewish schools abroad.

Mr. Zalman Aran, the Union's president urged it to enter new fields to reach every person who cared for Hebrew.

The Jerusalem Post Reporter

emphasized the need for a clear mandate for the Union, not only to promote study of Hebrew, but also to fight for a full Hebrew curriculum in Jewish schools abroad.

Mr. Zalman Aran, the Union's president urged it to enter new fields to reach every person who cared for Hebrew.

The Jerusalem Post Reporter

emphasized the need for a clear mandate for the Union, not only to promote study of Hebrew, but also to fight for a full Hebrew curriculum in Jewish schools abroad.

Mr. Zalman Aran, the Union's president urged it to enter new fields to reach every person who cared for Hebrew.

The Jerusalem Post Reporter

THE JERUSALEM POST

Founded as The Palestine Post in 1920. Published daily except Saturday and Sunday by The Palestine Post Ltd. Registered at the G.P.O. Copyright of all material reserved; reproduction permitted only by arrangement.

Editor
GERALDSON AARON

Managing Editor
THOMAS LURIE

Editorial Office and Management
10 Rothschild Boulevard
P.O. Box 21, Tel Aviv 61000
TEL AVIV, Post Box 22, Ramat
Neviim, P.O.B. 1120, Tel Aviv 61000
HAIFA, Post Box 1, Tel Aviv 31000
Annual Subscription £12.50

Thursday, August 7, 1958
21 AB, 5718-22 Hashanah, 1958

THE ill-fated summit conference has been tossed back to the United Nations Assembly where, DESPITE the supposed, it will remain SUMMIT main bogged down in a welter of talk.

Essentially, the summit conference was demanded by Russia as a counter-move to the sudden appearance of Western troops in the Lebanon and Jordan, and it would surely have been exploited to win some concession from the West for this move. There is much that must be done for the Middle East if the Arab states are to regain their individual equilibrium in the way of genuine development, but the Cold War bargaining of a great-power conference is not the place where such negotiations can best take place. The danger of a world war is probably no greater now than it was before the recent events in Iraq, and if the meeting was, as the Russians claimed, needed in order to avert this immediate threat, it has in these weeks of dithering probably become unnecessary.

The course run, however, on the abortive trip to the summit and down again indicates that the U.N. is increasingly claiming a place of importance for itself, particularly in the thinking of the smaller nations. It is the day of the small nations, whose favour is worth courting in the U.N. Assembly for the sake of their vote, as it never was for the physical assistance they could render the powers. And at the same time the powers may seek an alibi for their political de-sires in the U.N. and attack their rivals publicly without fear of dangerous consequences.

Observers who have been noting the growing power of the Asiatic nations within in the U.N. will not be surprised that it should have been firm Chinese intervention that has prevented Mr. Khrushchev from accepting the invitation to the Security Council. The Soviet Premier does not shun the limelight, and was apparently prepared to put up with the presence of a Nationalist China representative for the sake of the undoubted propaganda value of his appearance before the TV cameras of New York. In years to come this first known occasion when the Soviet empire was forced to take orders from People's China may well come to be considered a milestone in the development of the Eastern bloc, and of relations between the Western world and Asia in general.

The Assembly is not likely to go beyond a general ideological debate on the relative evils of that and that other "indirect aggression" — that is Soviet expansionism through Arab states, and the East's protest against what it terms the "direct aggression" of Western support for threatened Arab regimes. Israel need not regret the failure of the summit, and whatever way it goes we cannot look to benefit from the East-West struggle for the friendship of the Arab states. There are said to have been some rumblings lately in Turkey and also Persia, protesting that their pro-Western alignment must be justified if the West were unwilling to oppose Nasser at any point.

This did much to galvanize the United States into action, but if Ankara and Teheran wavered, it only weakened rather than strengthened the position of these countries themselves. Our position is undoubtedly that our position is to do largely to the steady development of our own defensive powers and to the fact that both blocs are persuaded that if it became necessary Israel would defend its integrity and independence against all comers. It may however be that some of our frontiers are too close to the Suez Canal, and the summit's outcome was booked up, and the two sides were talking about a general quiz that kept people glued to their radios and caused the news broadcast to be postponed until one o'clock in the morning. The Suez campaign could have been a smash in the press. But that's not the point you've come to stay.

A MAN who is normally uninterested in politics turned to tell me that he thought of the situation and launched instead into an account of the quiz which he attended. "That man Haim is extraordinary," he said. "When he hears a question addressed to somebody else he seems the sort of happy smile children have when they know the answer to a

A year before U.S. Super-Sabre jets were rushed across the Atlantic last month, the "Spirit of St. Louis II," a Super-Sabre jet, flew the air route covered by Charles Lindbergh in his historic flight 26 years ago. The jet made the trip in 4 hours 41 minutes, refuelling twice in the air, setting up a new transatlantic speed record. Express Photo

Across Atlantic by Jet Fighter

Carolina to Turkey: How U.S. Rushed Planes

By Brig. Gen. S.A. Marshall

ADANA, TURKEY, (NANA).

LIEUT. Thomas V. McNutt of Bloomfield Hills, Mich., was in a storm high above the Atlantic and 200 miles east of the Azores. His engines were not working. The gauge on his Super-Sabre jet told him he had just 50 pounds of fuel left, which meant he had about seven minutes in which either to refuel aloft or bail out.

McNutt is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

Peacetime air power never moved so fast as on July 15. Before mid-afternoon the 12 Super-Sabres of the 335th Tactical Fighter Squadron, which was the first wave, were bound for the Middle East.

The pilots were all like McNutt, who came along with the second wave 12 hours later. None had previously engaged in a continuous flight for more than five hours, which is the point where a jet pilot's nerves begin to tremble. This time they were supposed to stay out for 22 hours straight.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two-year-old daughter.

That is what the air force calls a "Spro" — a pilot with too few flying hours to qualify for a strategic mission. But Col. Franklin Fisher had named him to go with Task Force Bravo, which is the tactical air screen covering American forces in Lebanon from this far south. At Myrtle Beach, S.C., he had three minutes to part from his wife and two